NORTH CHARLEROI CITIZENS WILL VOTE ON BOND ISSUE

Will Rest with Them Whether Indebtedness Will Be Increased.

FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Grading And Paving Of Streets The Principal Object.

The North Charleroi council has become awakened to the need of improvements in their borough, and recenty passed an ordinance to the effect that on Tuesday, November 3rd, the citizens of that place shall vote on the question as to whether or not the indebtedness be increased $5,000, the money to be used in grading and paving of streets in the borough. At present there is but one little piece of paved street within the limits of the borough, that being but about fifteen hundred feet in length, the work being done by the Pittsburg Railway's company, along their tracks.

The council discussed the matter thoroughly at their last meeting and the ordinance was passed. It is thought that the citizens will vote in favor of the issue. A prominent resident of that place has expressed himself that the idea of a bond issue, so that the town could get the necessary funds to carry on the proposed much needed improvements, was a good one, and there was little doubt in his mind that there would be many opposing votes.

The net amount of the existing indebtedness of the Borough of North Charleroi is ascertained to be $16,000, which is seemingly rather large for a town the size, nevertheless there is much valuable property in that place, the assessed valuation being $302,000, and an increase of $5,000 which is only 1.59 per cent. for an increase in the indebtedness, of what is really a necessity would have little effect on the condition of the treasury.

Another matter which the council has taken up is that of the width of sidewalks. The ordinance which was approved the 25th day of September, 1899, called for sidewalks of a uniform width of four feet throughout the borough. This has been repealed and an ordinance framed which makes the sidewalks on all thirty foot streets six feet in width; on all forty foot streets eight feet in width; on all fifty feet streets, ten feet in width. This will go a great ways toward improving the appearance of the town.

Careful at Mingo.

There is no need of the fish warden at the mouth of Mingo, where the piscatorial art is in a flourishing condition. For several days the bank of the creek has been lined with people who have been having excellent success in capturing the finny tribe. A day or two ago a couple of men suggested that a seine be put in the creek, the object being of course to catch the fish in greater quantities. Their reception, however, was of a nature entirely unexpected for those who have been participating in the sport, threatened to stone the proposers and destroy their seine if any such attempt was made. That settled the proposition, and fishing with rod and line is still the rage at Mingo. The fish landed are mostly German carp, and some of large size have been taken.

Man Barks Like A Dog When He Is Spoken To

There was great excitement at Greensburg and Grapeville yesterday over the capture of a wild man thought to have been suffering from hydrophobia. He was chased from Grapeville town, where he was discovered digging like a dog under George Baughman's stable, to a point midway between that place and Jeannette he was captured by Jacob Lute and George Baughman. They endeavored to take him to Greensburg bu he became very violent and it was necessary to secure a wagon. The man was finally landed in the lockup by Constable A. B. Miller.

A large dog accompanied the man. He disappeared when first seen and later was found under Baughman's stable, as stated above. Seeing that he was discovered, the man fled. W. J. Byers, who was on his way to Grapeville, also saw the man and determined that he was either crazy or drunk. He would not talk and acted very strangely. When Baughman and Lute captured the man he barked like a dog. Part of the time he seemed to be praying and talking to his mother. Then again he would curse and swear. At Jeannette he made frantic efforts to bite his captors.

REZY HELD UNDER BAIL OF $6,000

At the habeas corpus hearing before Judge Umbel, at Uniontown Tuesday afternoon, William Rezy, charged with embezzlement, larceny by bailee and conspiracy to defraud, was held under $6,000 bail. No testimony was taken, the amount being fixed after considerable argument on each side.

Attorneys A. E. Jones, R. P. Kennedy and Edward Campbell represented the defendant. It was contended that Rezy had had no hearing and that he was entitled to know the charges against him before being placed on trial and that in any event he was entitled to reasonable bail. After hearing arguments on both sides Judge Umbel fixed the bail at $2,000 in each of the three cases, making $6,000 in all. Rezy was returned to jail. He is making an effort to raise the amount.

ADJUDICATION BY M'ILVAINE

Says Court Will Not Aid In Enforcement Of Illegal Contract.

CASE OF VANDERGRIFTS

"That a court in equity will not aid in the enforcement of an illegal contract, but will leave the parties where they have placed themselves," is in brief the decree of the court in an adjudication handed down yesterday by Judge J. A. McIlvaine in the Vandergrift case.

John H. Vandergrift, the plaintiff in the case, filed a bill in equity against Julia A. Vandergrift, executrix of the estate of John M. Vandergrift, asking for an appointment of a receiver to take charge of affairs of partnership existing between the plaintiff and deceased and for accounting and the paying over to the plaintiff of certain sums alleged due.

At the hearing of the suit on Friday it was brought to light that John M. Vandergrift was not the only person interested in the distillery, as he made affidavit to in his application for a license, but that his father, according to an agreement between them, was a partner in the distillery, though a silent partner. This made it clear that the distillery had been running illegally, as no license was granted to any partnership.

COKE OVENS ARE FIRED THIS WEEK AT BROWNSVILLE

South Brownsville, Sept. 30.—The Brownsville Coke company has fired its plant in full after an idleness of several months. Inquiries for coke, it is said, are increasing each week and it is given out here that this plant will be kept in full operation all winter.

The Century and Champion plants, located about a mile above town on Dunlaps creek are in operation and have been most of the summer. The only thing needed at the present time to make the three towns here boom is a rise in the river sufficient to float the loaded rafts of coal to the southern markets and allow the empties to be returned.

Contractor Conn is rushing work on South Brownsville's new school building. The brick work is now laid to the top of the second floor showing the imposing dimensions of the beautiful temple of learning. In a few days the workmen will get the building order roof so as there will be no delay in the completion of the work. A feature of this new building is an "assembly hall" in which school entertainment and graduating exercises will be held. South Brownsville insists on being "different" from the old mother town and for this reason it calls its school hall the "assembly hall" instead of "the auditorium."

Since removing the postoffice of South Brownsville into the new Crawford buiding the receipts of the office have been almost doubed. This is because of the business men on this side of the creek supporting their own town office. The increase in this office has put a crimp in the receipts of the Brownsville office and it is said the cut will be deeper when free delivery is established in the mother town. When the postal department sees fit to combine the two offices and establishes a free delivery system for the two towns, it is believed the South Brownsville office will be selected as the distributing point.

BEER AGENT IN THE TOILS

August Vincentine, a foreigner, said to be an agent for the Charleroi Brewing company at Midway, was arrested yesterday by Detective James Milsted, of Washington, charged with the violation of the liquor laws. The defendant demanded a hearing which was fixed for next Tuesday at 2 o'clock, before Justice E. N. Dunlap at Washington. Detective Cummins, is the private prosecutor. Vincentine was committed to jail yesterday in default of bail.

MEETING OF BROTHERHOOD

Dr. Rendell Of Greensburg Delivers Address At W. A. Church.

MUSIC SPECIAL FEATURE

The Brotherhood of the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church met last night in the church. The speaker of the evening was Rev. J. B. Rendell, pastor of the Westminster church of Greensburg.

Dr. Rendell spoke on the topic. "Men Wanted" making a very forceful address. He made a number of good points. He said that men should be larger than the position they fill, and a particular kind, a Christan man. A man should look to the things high and noble, he said.

The male quartet composed of Messrs. Manon, Bowman, Jobes and Kendricks furnished selections. After the meeting in the auditorium, a social session was held in the basement. Addresses were made by visiting brothers.

RETURN OF SALE OF JUTTE AND COMPANY MADE

The return of sale has been made to the court in the action of the New York Trust company, trustee, against C. Jutte and Co. and F. N. Hoffstot. The deed transferring the properties of the defendant coal company has also been placed on record. The sale includes the properties of C. Jutte and Co. by reason of default in payment of mortgage and interest. As directed by the court the properties were offered at public sale in Pittsburg and at that sale were sold to James W. Friend for $15,000, he being the highest bidder.

The properties included a large acreage of coal in this county, four boats, and stock of the Marine Coal company. The costs and expenses of the trustee incurred in foreclosing the mortgage, and the making of the sale, and other performances of its duties.

RUN 'EM DOWN SAYS THE BURGESS

Chief of Police Rottler, of Coal Valley, has entered a complaint against automobilists rounding the corner of Pittsburg and Main streets at a too rapid rate. He says that some of the drivers do not have any regard for the public at all, but on the other hand Burgess Soisson pointed out that it would probably be a good thing if an automobile did run into some of the loafers here. He believes that automobiles exceed their speed at many points in town, but he said he is convinced that there are some people who loaf on the corners who should receive a lesson by getting bumped.

CHARLEROI MAN MARSHAL OF PARADE

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Walters attended the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of Yantannais Tribe No. 256, Improved Order of Red Men, at Fayette City, last evening. There was a parade at 7 o'clock, of which Mr. Walters was Chief Marshall, followed by a sumptious banquet in the lodge rooms, there being about 400 plates set.

REAL INVENTOR OF THE FERRIS WHEEL

Samuel Bowman Smith, a colored man who died at his home in Carrollton, east end of the Monongahela river bridge, Saturday last, was quite a genius. In his day he had manufactured many contrivances of an intricate nature, but from none of which did he derive any revenue. It is said he was the real inventor or originator of the "Ferris" wheel, which was such a popular feature of the World's Fair at Chicago, in 1983. Whether this statement be true or not, it is nevertheless a fact that long before the date of the fair he had erected a wheel along novel lines, which later were elaborated upon, and which found their culmination in the big wheel which found such a conspicuous place in the Midway at Chicago. Mr. Smith had numerous other devices, all of them interesting, and all of them showing the constructive and inventive nature of the man. Among his friends, and they were legion in all this district, he was familiarly known as "Uncle Sam," and was popular with all classes, among whom his passing away will be learned with regret.

A Great London Success.

"The Girls of Gotenberg," now being presented by Charles Frohman at the Knickerbocker Theatre, Broadway, New York, is the greatest of London musical comedy successes. It is full of good music, written by William T. Francis, general musical director of all of Mr. Frohman's plays. The New York World has secured the best song of this big production, and will give it away, words and music complete, with next Sunday's World. The number selected is a love song entitled, "I Will Be Waiting for You." It is very sweet and tuneful. Order next Sunday's World to-day.

Temporary Dump Makes Matters Worse Instead Of Better.

PETITION IS FRAMED

Forty Men Sign Paper, To Be Forwarded To State Board.

The matter of the garbage dump at Monessen which has been causing considerable trouble, is still a matter of argument, and if the much mixed up affairs concerning it are not straightened out soon, prosecutions may be the result. The latest development is the framing up of a petition the residents of a place called "Bakestown," which is on the hill of Monessen, although included in the borough limits, the dump being in that place. The petition is to be sent to the State Board of Health. It asks that relief be provided and the nuisance be stated.

Several days ago the council received a large number of kicks about the dump and petitions that a new place be provided for it was a nuisance to the residents near the dump. After arguing over the question for sometime a temporary dump was provided which it was thought would be a relief to all parties. It happened however that the temporary dump was not fifty feet away from the old one, and a number of merchants and individuals who hauled their own garbage instead of depositing it in the proper place, on the newly provided ground, placed it to the old dump. This of course, increased the acreage of the dump and instead of being a remedy in matters, the action of council proved the means of making things worse.

Then it is stated that the garbage hauler, who was authorized to turn the material failed to obey his instructions, and things have been gradually becoming worse until the petition was gotten out and circulated among the residents of that district, there being some forty signers. They are determined to secure relief and it is hinted proceedings will be instituted against ones who are to blame for the state of affairs.

Vandergould Returns Home From The West

C. W. Albright, who is known on the stage as "The Great Vandergould" has returned after playing a seven week's engagement in the West, first with the Great Western Carnival company and later with the Western Vaudeville Association, closing up last week at Racine, Wisconsin. Young Albright's handcuff, jail breaking and boiler escape stunts took well in the West. He played all over Wisconsin, and the papers of every town he visited were filled with articles concerning his tricks.

Albright will spend a few days at his home here and then likely leave for the West again to join Mabellle showboat.

People Will Decide.

The council of our sister borough, North Charleroi, which there is little doubt will sometime become a part of Charleroi, has decided to submit the proposition to the people of that place as to whether or not the indebtedness of the borough be increased $5,000 for the purpose of grading and paving the streets. These improvements are much needed in the little town, and the people no doubt will decide in favor of the issue, although the indebtedness is as present rather large for a borough its size.

But Justice.

An alderman in one of the cities of this state has just been found guilty of extortion and has been sent to the eastern penitentiary for the term of two years. Two constables who have been doing the same thing were likewise covicted. They were sent to the county jail for a term of months. If these officers were really guilty—and the evidence was strong enough to convince the jurors who tried them—they got nothing more than they deserved. It is a heinous crime for the law's sworn servants to ignore their oath of office and forget the responsibility resting upon them for the sake of personal gain. And their crime is magnified when they make dupes out of the ignorant litigants who appear in their courts. Prison is the place for such.

How a Player Goes Back.

"Just now, while the annual Cy Young and George Van Haltren stories are going around and the baseball writers are using up reams of paper telling how long these men have been in the game, a lot of folks are wondering why so many ball players last a few seasons, go back to the minors and then disappear entirely," says a baseball veteran.

"The average baseball life is generally conceded to be somewhere between 10 and 12 years. A man may work in a rolling mill 12 hours a day for 20 years, he can make delicate watches and high-grade works of art for a score of years, he can engage in all sorts of work that requires skill and good eyesight for perhaps twice as long as the average player retains his skill, and there must be some good reasons for this.

"It is a noticeable fact that all the ball players who have been in the game for years, and who will play as they used to, never lay off and loaf for long periods. Ball players by the hundreds quit all kinds of work when the season ends in the middle of October, and do not do a tap of work until March, when their clubs go South.

"Then the winter laggards have to swelter and work in a hot climate to get down to pay weight. Tacking weight off rapidly always saps a man's strength, so that those who grow fat in the winter are in a weakened condition for several weeks, and cannot do themselves justice.

"The temptation to drink and lead a fast life are greater in baseball than in more prosaic occupations. A star ball player is much sought, and hundreds of hangers-on in places where a ball player shouldn't be are tickled to death if the diamond hero will join them in a "good time." A lot of the younger fellows fall for it, and in consequence come back in the spring in mighty poor shape. An observer could name two dozen veterans who slow up just a little each season, who worry and worry to distraction each spring to catch on by the time the season starts, yet who spend their winters in luxurious idleness. It seems a queer way of doing.

"Some one has suggested that club owners sign up their players to a 12-months' contract and run a woodchoping brigade or a pedestrian club in the winter time. But the managers and magnates have enough woes keeping the men going during the season.

ITALIANS LISTEN TO ADDRESS BY GOOD SPEAKER

Last night the Italian missionary, Signore Thomas Baron, a prominent attorney of Oakmont spoke in a practical and enthusiastic manner to a large crowd of local Italians at the M. E. church, upon a prepared thesis: Religion and Socialism. The orator was very convincing and left a good impression in the souls of the Italians there, who earnestly desire to see the scepticism and the athesism suppresed.

We thank some of our intelligent friends, which although they are not in our line, for all that they helped, and encouraged us in the campaign against the pope's mystifying religion. We will do Christian work very well, if we tell to each of such persons with sweet and affectionate words, if we pluck them off from the superstition and ignore and in conclusion if we let them know the sentiment of virtue, of honesty of progress and civility

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Weeds That Sheep Eat.

The Minnesota station gives the analyses of weeds which sheep eat readily and their protein contents compared with alfalfa, clover and timothy hay. It will be a surprise to many to see how high in protein these weeds are, and it suggests the reason sheep flourish on them, worthless as they are otherwise. Here are the analyses: Lambs' quarters, 25.06 protein, 51.64 carbohydrates, 1.96 fat; purslane, 26.13 protein, 53.70 carbohydrates, 2.9 fat; pigweed, 26.54 protein, 62.86 carbohydrates, 1.36 fat; dandelion, 21.61 protein, 58.95 carbohydrates, 2.70 fat; catnip, 22.25 protein, 63.07 carbohydrates, 2.66 fat; goldenrod, 11.63 protein, 76.63 carbohydrates, 4.85 fat; mustard, 15.75 protein, 75.50 carbohydrates, 1.55 fat; quack grass, 11.27 protein, 79.12 carbohydrates, 1.96 fat; alfalfa, 20 protein, 40.64 carbohydrates, 2.46 fat; clover, 13.35 protein, 52.28 carbohydrates, 3.65 fat; timothy hay, 8.75 protein, 41.76 carbohydrates, 2.16 fat.

Soiling Crops.

A mixture of Kaffir corn and cowpeas at the Pennsylvania station produced the largest yield of green substance per acre, was relished by the cows and was entirely satisfactory from the standpoint of milk production. Alfalfa produced the largest yield of air dry substance per acre, and the cows seemed to hold up better in milk production when on alfalfa than on any other crops tested. Oats and peas proved satisfactory as a soiling crop. Rye produced the earliest soiling crop and gave a large yield of dry substance per acre, but under average conditions it ripens too quickly to be most satisfactory. The different forage crops tested seemed to have little, if any, effect upon the composition of the milk.—American Cultivator.

It Is Odd.

Making More Than a Living
Nearly every man who works steadily makes more than a living. During these slow times the men who have saved something appreciate what it is to have something laid away for a rainy day. A few cents a day soon counts up, and when savings are placed in a bank at a tidy interest the sum soon grows to proportions that make it a safeguard against want when work is not plentiful. Figure up how much more than a living you are making now, and place the difference in this bank. Four per cent. interest paid in savings department

Paulton's Prisoner.

By W. F. Bryan.

Copyrighted, 1906, by Associated Literary Press.

Absurd as it may seem, Edith Mortimer had run away from happiness.

Realizing that Guy Paulton was determined to marry her, she had looked into the commanding eyes and surveyed the determined chin and had fled in a panic to the mountains after artfully announcing that she was bound for the shore.

This was not because she did not want to marry Paulton. To the contrary, the prospect thrilled her with tender delight but what she did want was another social season without ties of any sort. She did not want to retire to the ranks of engaged girls and wallflowers after only one year's triumph as the belle of the season.

Guy, on the contrary, seemed determined to be married at once, and as a last resort she had fled to escape his proposal. From babyhood Guy had had a masterful way, and Edith knew that if she stopped to argue she was lost.

Her old chum, Belle Marston, who was going to Beach Haven, forwarded Edith's mail and otherwise helped to maintain the polite but obvious fiction.

Loyally she strove to protect her friend's secret, and, though Paulton alternately begged and threatened, he could gain no hint of Edith's whereabouts. Edith smiled at the desperate letters he wrote her she carefully saved them in her little rosewood traveling desk, and could Paulton have seen the tender light in her eyes as she reread them in the quiet of the summer nights he would have been content. The trouble was that Paulton could not see, and he was putting in a most uncomfortable summer.

Oddly enough Edith was really enjoying her runaway vacation. She had stumbled on a quaint village far from the haunts of fashion. In simple gowns and with her hair in braids she rejoiced at the freedom from dress and social routine that had been her portion all winter. In her gingham sunbonnet she might have passed for the daughter of a farmer, and for the moment Guy Paulton took her to be such when he came upon her in the little woodland where Edith spent most of her time. Her back was turned to him as he parted the bushes and trampled down the ferns.

Edith started at the sound of his voice, but promptly drew the all concealing bonnet down in front and managed to stammer an answer to his question if she had seen any soldiers about.

For the first time she noticed that he was in uniform, and she immediately realized that the rough service dress was most becoming. Paulton was built in heroic mold, and, though he looked well in the conventional dress of a man of fashion, the heavy blue shirt, open to display his fine throat, and tight fitting riding trousers emphasized the good lines of his powerfully muscled figure.

Edith shook her head.

"You are certain that there have been no soldiers about," he asked again, "no chaps in brown uniform?"

"Haven't seen any," denied Edith in nasal tones. "You're the first soldier I've seen since the county fair. Is it a parade?"

"It's a game of war," explained Paulton. "They divided the militia into two armies. The browns must beat the blues to win, and of course we blues are anxious to see that they don't. I am supposed to be scouting."

"Like real soldiers?" she asked innocently.

"Of course," was the impatient reply. "That is the whole idea, to train us like the regulars."

Edith giggled in a very good imitation of Dolly Spence, the village flirt.

"I didn't know that real soldiers stopped to talk to girls when there was a war on," she suggested as she raised her hand to the bonnet the better to adjust its shade.

The movement was fatal to concealment. Paulton noticed that her hand was unusually white for a girl who worked about the farm, and the next instant he recognized the slight filigree band that circled one of the slender fingers. It had been his mother's, and how often he had suggested to Edith to wear it!

"We are like regular soldiers also because we are not above a pleasant little flirtation," declared Paulton smilingly. "I believe that a regular soldier would kiss such a pretty face as yours!"

"How do you know that it is pretty?" demanded Edith from the security of the sunbonnet's shade. It hurt her to think that Guy would flirt with any girl he met, but she was determined to carry the game as far as she dared.

"I'll take the face on trust," announced Paulton calmly. "All's fair in love and war, they say, so your face must be fair, since this is mimic war."

"Maybe it's only make believe fair, since this is make believe war," suggested Edith coquettishly.

"To the contrary, this is very real war," declared Paulton, "and I am obliged to place you under arrest."

"What for?" demanded Edith, not without some alarm. "You cannot draw country folks into your games."

"You are wrong," retorted Paulton. "It is the soldier's duty to take into custody those enemies of his country whose sentiments threaten the success of a campaign."

"But I am not your enemy," protested Edith. "I won't be taken prisoner."

"Perhaps," asserted Paulton, "but a stern duty confronts me. I must take you a prisoner and hale you before a court martial unless"—

He paused tantalizingly.

"Unless?" She told herself that if he demanded a kiss as the price of her freedom she would never let him go again.

"There is but one way out," continued Paulton, "give your solemn promise to your captor that you will be his prisoner for life. Come, is a prison cell beyond here. I passed a church not very long ago. We will slip over there and get married, and then I shall be certain that you are not an enemy to the country."

"And if I refuse?" asked Edith loftily, in her anger dropping her vocal disguise.

"In that case," answered Paulton, "I am afraid you will be thrown into the guardhouse until you change your mind."

"I shall report you to the colonel," cried Edith angrily. "He will not tolerate such conduct."

"I am quite certain that the colonel will approve my conduct," said Guy placidly. "Coming on the train he told me that I ought to marry, and I assured him that, through no fault of mine, bachelorhood was my lot. I am sure that he will be pleased at the promptness with which I have acted upon his suggestion when I bring my bride into camp."

"I won't be your bride," stormed Edith. "You are rude and ungentlemanly to take unfair advantage of a woman."

"All's fair in love and war," reminded Paulton, "and this is both love and war. I am doing the loving and you have been doing the warring. Do you think it was fair to run away as you did and never give me a hint of your address?"

"You know me?" gasped Edith.

"Most assuredly," declared Paulton. "I was not positive until I saw that you were wearing the little ring I gave you and which you never would wear in town. Then I knew that perhaps there was a chance. Will you marry me, Edith?"

"Not now," protested Edith in sudden panic. "Guy, don't make me marry you right away. You have your scouting to do, and I never did like the minister of that little church," she added inconsequentially. "Dr. Miron is much nicer."

"Shall I come back when this cruel war is over—next week?" asked Guy tenderly. "Then I'll ask Dr. Miron to officiate, and we'll have our friends up to see the prisoner of war marry her captor, just as they do in historical novels."

"I think that I'll just have to marry you," admitted Edith. "You are such a pest, and forever."

"All's fair"— Paulton began his favorite quotation, but the rest was lost in the pasteboard tunnel of the sunbonnet as he claimed a kiss.

The Larynx.

The larynx has been compared to a wind, a reed and a stringed instrument. The comparison of it to a reed gave rise to the not very accurate phrase "vocal chords" as the name of the two cushions which are its most prominent features. But no string, so short as those vocal chords could produce a musical bass note. In fact, the comparison of the larynx to any instrument which produces only musical tones is misleading to begin with. There is no instrument but the human voice, both song and speech, and in this comprehensive view the larynx merely as a producer of musical sounds we have no further concern with them at present. Besides, the voice can be trained for speech, elocution and oratory without knowledge of the physiology of the larynx.

We have the power of adjusting the lungs, of carrying the tension of its cords, cushions or ligaments, as they have been properly called. We can do these things without scientific technical knowledge of how they are done, without any knowledge of the [illegible] trainer of the voice to teach the pupils how to do them.—Chambers' Journal.

The Reward of Beauty.

"What a beautiful little girl!" said the woman.

"Yes," replied the man, "and some day it may be necessary for her father to pay millions in order to get some scrawny little foreigner with bowlegs and watery eyes and a receding chin to marry her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Govern your passions, otherwise they will govern you.—Horace.

Plans For New Dairy Barns.

For the past two or three years the dairy division of the department of agriculture has been making an investigation of all the principal dairy barns in the United States and a study of the best methods of construction, with reference to convenience, cheapness in feeding and hauling of stock, sanitation, etc. The result is that the division has a large number of plans suitable for building barns and stables of varying costs, so that any one contemplating building a barn can obtain, by simply corresponding with the chief of the division, a set of building plans which will probably just about meet his needs.

Horse Sense.

Turning the work teams out to pasture at night is better than keeping them shut up in a close, poorly ventilated stable.

Every farmer must have horses. Why not have the best, then, and make a nice little profit on the side from the colts?

The time to sell the colt is when a good price is offered. It's good policy to have him ready to attract the good price, though.

Begin to handle the little fellow when he is very young if you would keep him from getting wild. Be judicious about it, though, at all times.

Hog Notes.

The hog with large bones is rapidly growing in favor.

Very frequently the feeding amounts to more than the pedigree.

Dipping hogs is no longer a tedious job. The modern tank simplifies it.

An average litter of seven or eight pigs will be pretty nearly sure profit.

A good way to save high priced corn is to provide good alfalfa pasture.

The man who never has dipped his hogs is the man who objects to it most.

A good boar will do a great deal to put the hog end of your farming upon solid footing.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Silage For Beef.

Everywhere the feeding of silage to dairy cattle and beef cattle, horses and hogs is attracting each year more and more attention. The Ohio experiment station has recently completed a test in which it was established that corn silage under the conditions of the experiment had a value of $4.63 per ton in feeding for beef. In view of this, let any one not feeding silage consider what he is losing when an acre of corn makes ten to fifteen tons of silage.

Green Food For Poultry.

The value of green food for poultry lies in the aid it renders the digestion of other foods and in the effect of distending or adding bulk to the ration, besides affording various and valuable nutrients, particularly protein, which food constituent is indispensible in the growth of any animal. Protein is the element of food which produces bone and muscle and any growing animal in order to thrive must have the required amount.

Mashes For Poultry.

The feeding of mashes to poultry is not looked upon with so much favor at the present time as formerly, says the Farmers Advocate. However, if mashes are to be fed, skimmilk or buttermilk will make a valuable addition to the mash. Milk in any form is a valuable source of protein, and the birds should be fed as liberally as possible of milk and its products.

THE CHARLEROI MAIL

Entered second class mail at Charleroi, June 15, 1900, according to Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

VOL. 9. No. 42 CHARLEROI, WASHINGTON CO., PA. WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1908 One Cent

NORTH CHARLEROI CITIZENS WILL VOTE ON BOND ISSUE

Will Rest with Them Whether Indebtedness Will Be Increased.

FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Grading And Paving Of Streets The Principal Object.

The North Charleroi council has become awakened to the need of improvements in their borough and recenty passed an ordinance to the effect that on Tuesday, November 3rd, the citizens of that place shall vote on the question as to whether or not the indebtedness be increased $5,000, the money to be used in grading and paving of streets in the borough. At present there is but one little piece of paved street within the limits of the borough, that being but about fifteen hundred feet in length, the work being done by the Pittsburg Railway's company, along their tracks.

The council discussed the matter thoroughly at their last meeting and the ordinance was passed. It is thought that the citizens will vote in favor of the issue. A prominent resident of that place has expressed himself that the idea of a bond issue, so that the town could get the necessary funds to carry on the proposed much needed improvements, was a good one, and there was little doubt in his mind that there would be many opposing votes.

The net amount of the existing indebtedness of the Borough of North Charleroi is ascertained to be $16,000, which is seemingly rather large for a town the size, nevertheless there is much valuable property in that place, the assessed valuation being $302,000, and an increase of $5,000 which is only 1.59 per cent. for an increase in the indebtedness, of what is really a necessity would have little effect on the condition of the treasury.

Another matter which the council has taken up is that of the width of sidewalks. The ordinance which was approved the 25th day of September, 1899, called for sidewalks of a uniform width of four feet throughout the borough. This has been repealed and an ordinance framed which makes the sidewalks on all thirty foot streets six feet in width; on all forty foot streets eight feet in width; on all fifty feet streets, ten feet in width. This will go a great ways toward improving the appearance of the town.

Careful at Mingo.

There is no need of the fish warden at the mouth of Mingo, where the piscatorial art is in a flourishing condition. For several days the bank of the creek has been lined with people who have been having excellent success in capturing the finny tribe. A day or two ago a couple of men suggested that a seine be put in the creek, the object being of course to catch the fish in greater quantities. Their reception, however, was of a nature entirely unexpected for those who have been participating in the sport, threatened to stone the proposers and destroy their seine if any such attempt was made. That settled the proposition, and fishing with rod and line is still the rage at Mingo. The fish landed are mostly German carp, and some of large size have been taken.

Man Barks Like A Dog When He Is Spoken To

There was great excitement at Greensburg and Grapeville yesterday over the capture of a wild man thought to have been suffering from hydrophobia. He was chased from Grapeville town, where he was discovered digging like a dog under George Baughman's stable, to a point midway between that place and Jeannette he was captured by Jacob Lute and George Baughman. They endeavored to take him to Greensburg but he became very violent and it was necessary to secure a wagon. The man was finally landed in the lockup by Constable A. B. Miller.

A large dog accompanied the man. He disappeared when first seen and later was found under Baughman's stable, as stated above. Seeing that he was discovered, the man fled. W. J. Byers, who was on his way to Grapeville, also saw the man and determined that he was either crazy or drunk. He would not talk and acted very strangely. When Baughman and Lute captured the man he barked like a dog. Part of the time he seemed to be praying and talking to his mother. Then again he would curse and swear. At Jeannette he made frantic efforts to bite his captors.

REZY HELD UNDER BAIL OF $6,000

At the habeas corpus hearing before Judge Umbel, at Uniontown Tuesday afternoon, William Rezy, charged with embezzlement, larceny by bailee and conspiracy to defraud, was held under $6,000 bail. No testimony was taken, the amount being fixed after considerable argument on each side.

Attorneys A. E. Jones, R. F. Kennedy and Edward Campbell represented the defendant. It was contended that Rezy had had no hearing and that he was entitled to know the charges against him before being placed on trial and that in any event he was entitled to reasonable bail. After hearing arguments on both sides Judge Umbel fixed the bail at $2,000 in each of the three cases, making $6,000 in all. Rezy was returned to jail. He is making an effort to raise the amount.

ADJUDICATION BY M'ILVAINE

Says Court Will Not Aid In Enforcement Of Illegal Contract.

CASE OF VANDERGRIFTS

"That a court in equity will not [illegible] contract, but will leave the parties where they have placed themselves," is in brief the decree of the court in an adjudication handed down yesterday by Judge J. A. McIlvaine in the Vandergrift case.

John H. Vandergrift, the plaintiff in the case, filed a bill in equity against Julia A. Vandergrift, executrix of the estate of John M. Vandergrift, asking for an appointment of a receiver to take charge of affairs of partnership existing between the plaintiff and deceased and for accounting and the paying over to the plaintiff of certain sums alleged due.

At the hearing of the suit on Friday it was brought to light that John M. Vandergrift was not the only person interested in the distillery, as he made affidavit to in his application for a license, but that his father, according to an agreement between them, was a partner in the distillery, though a silent partner. This made it clear that the distillery had been running illegally, as no license was granted to any parntership.

COKE OVENS ARE FIRED THIS WEEK AT BROWNSVILLE

South Brownsville, Sept. 30.—The Brownsville Coke company has fired its plant in full after an idleness of several months. Inquiries for coke, it is said, are increasing each week and it is given out here that this plant will be kept in full operation all winter.

The Century and Champion plants, located about a mile above town on Dunlaps creek are in operation and have been most of the summer. The only thing needed at the present time to make the three towns here boom is a rise in the river sufficient to float the loaded rafts of coal to the southern markets and allow the empties to be returned.

Contractor Conn is rushing work on South Brownsville's new school building. The brick work is now laid to the top of the second floor showing the imposing dimensions of the beautiful temple of learning. In a few days the workmen will get the building under roof so as there will be no delay in the completion of the work. A feature of this new building is an "assembly hall" in which school entertainment and graduating exercises will be held. South Brownsville insists on being "different" from the old mother town and for this reason it calls its school hall the "assembly hall" instead of "the auditorium."

Since removing the postoffice of South Brownsville into the new Crawford building the receipts of the office have been almost doubled. This is because of the business men on this side of the creek supporting their own town office. The increase in this office has put a crimp in the receipts of the Brownsville office and it is said the cut will be deeper when free delivery is established in the mother town. When the postal department sees fit to combine the two offices and etsabishes a free delivery system for the two towns, it is believed the South Brownsville office will be selected as the distributing point.

BEER AGENT IN THE TOILS

August Vincentine, a foreigner, said to be an agent for the Charleroi Brewing company at Midway, was arrested yesterday by Detective James Milsted, of Washington, charged with the violation of the liquor laws. The defendant demanded a hearing which was fixed for next Tuesday at 2 o'clock, before Justice E. N. Dunlap at Washington. Detective Cummins, is the private prosecutor. Vincentine was committed to jail yesterday in default of bail.

MEETING OF BROTHERHOOD

Dr. Rendell Of Greensburg Delivers Address At W. A. Church.

MUSIC SPECIAL FEATURE

The Brotherhood of the Washington [illegible] night in the church. The speaker of the evening was Rev. J. B. Rendell, pastor of the Westminster church of Greensburg.

Dr. Rendell spoke on the topic, "Men Wanted" making a very forceful address. He made a number of good points. He said that men should be larger than the position they fill, and a particular kind, a Christian man. A man should look to the things high and noble, he said.

The male quartet composed of Messrs. Mason, Bowman, Jobes and Hendricks furnished selections. After the meeting in the auditorium, a social session was held in the basement. Addresses were made by visiting brothers.

RETURN OF SALE OF JUTTE AND COMPANY MADE

The return of sale has been made to the court in the action of the New York Trust company, trustee, against C. Jutte and Co. and F. N. Hoffstot. The deed transferring the properties of the defendant coal company has also been placed on record. The sale includes the properties of C. Jutte and Co. by reason of default in payment of mortgage and interest. As directed by the court the properties were offered at public sale in Pittsburg and at that sale were sold to James W. Friend for $15,000, he being the highest bidder.

The properties included a large acreage of coal in this county, four boats, and stock of the Marine Coal company. The costs and expenses, of the trustee incurred in foreclosing the mortgage, and the making of the sale, and other performances of its duties.

RUN 'EM DOWN SAYS THE BURGESS

Chief of Police Rottler, of Connellsville, has entered a complaint against automobilists rounding the corner of Pittsburg and Main streets at a too rapid rate. He says that some of the drivers do not have any regard for the public at all, but on the other hand Burgess Soisson pointed out that it would probably be a good thing if an automboile did run into some of the loafers here. He believes that automobiles exceed their speed at many points in town, but he said he is convinced that there are some people who loaf on the corners who should receive a lesson by getting bumped.

REAL INVENTOR OF THE FERRIS WHEEL

Samuel Bowman Smith, a colored man who died at his home in Carrollton, east end of the Monongahela river bridge, Saturday last, was quite a genius. In his day he had manufactured many contrivances of an intricate nature, but from none of which did he derive any revenue. It is said he was the real inventor or originator of the "Ferris" wheel, which was such a popular feature of the World's Fair at Chicago, in 1983. Whether this statement be true or not, it is nevertheless a fact that long before the date of the fair he had erected a wheel along novel lines, which later were elaborated upon, and which found their culmination in the big wheel which found such a conspicuous place in the Midway at Chicago. Mr. Smith had numerous other devices, all of them interesting, and all of them showing the constructive and inventive nature of the man. Among his friends, and they were legion in all this district, he was familiarly known as "Uncle Sam," and was popular with all classes, among whom his passing away will be learned with regret.

A Great London Success.

"The Girls of Gotenberg," now being presented by Charles Frohman at the Knickerbocker Theatre, Broadway, New York, is the greatest of London musical comedy successes. It is full of good music, written by William T. Francis, general musical director of all of Mr. Frohman's plays. The New York World has secured the best song of this big production, and will give it away, words and music complete, with next Sunday's World. The number selected is a love song entitled, "I Will Be Waiting for You." It is very sweet and tuneful. Order next Sunday's World to-day.

Temporary Dump Makes Matters Worse Instead Of Better.

PETITION IS FRAMED

Forty Men Sign Paper, To Be Forwarded To State Board.

The matter of the garbage dump at Monessen which has been causing considerable trouble, is still a matter of argument, and if the much mixed up affairs concerning it are not straightened out soon, prosecutions may be the result. The latest development is the framing up of a petition the residents of a place called "Dutchtown," which is on the hill of Monessen, although included in the borough limits, the dump being in that place. The petition is to be sent to the State Board of Health. It asks that relief be provided and the nuisance be abated.

Several days ago the council received a large number of kicks about the dump and petitions that a new place be provided for it was a nuisance to the residents near the dump. After arguing over the question for some time a temporary dump was provided which it was thought would be a relief to all parties. It happened however that the temporary dump was not fifty feet away from the old one, and a number of merchants and individuals who hauled their own garbage instead of depositing it in the proper place, on the newly provided ground, placed it to the old dump. This of course, increased the acreage of the dump and instead of being a remedy in matters, the action of council proved the means of making things worse.

Then it is stated that the garbage hauler, who was authorized to burn the material failed to obey his instructions, and things have been gradually becoming worse until the petition was gotten out and circulated among the residents of that district, there being some forty signers. They are determined to secure relief and it is hinted proceedings will be instituted against ones who are to blame for the state of affairs.

Vandergould Returns Home From The West

C. W. Albright, who is known of the stage as "The Great Vandergould" has returned after playing a seven week's engagement in the West, first with the Great Western Carnival company and later with the Western Vaudeville Association, ending up last week at Racine, Wisconsin. Young Albright's handcuff, jail breaking and boiler escape stunts took well in the West. He played all over Wisconsin, and the papers of every town he visited were filled with articles concerning his tricks.

Albright will spend a few days at his home here and then likely leave for the West again to join Mackie's showboat.

People Will Decide.

The council of our sister borough, North Charleroi, which there is little doubt will sometime become a part of Charleroi, has decided to submit the proposition to the people of that place as to whether or not the indebtedness of the borough be increased $5,000 for the purpose of grading and paving the streets. These improvements are much needed in the little town, and the people no doubt will decide in favor of the issue, although the indebtedness is as present rather large for a borough its size.

But Justice.

An alderman in one of the cities of this state has just been found guilty of extortion and has been sent to the eastern penitentiary for the term of two years. Two constables who have been doing the same thing were likewise covicted. They were sent to the county jail for a term of months. If these officers were really guilty—and the evidence was strong enough to convince the jurors who tried them—they got nothing more than they deserved. It is a heinous crime for the law's sworn servants to ignore their oath of office and forget the responsibility resting upon them for the sake of personal gain. And their crime is magnified when they make dupes out of the ignorant litigants who appear in their courts. Prison is the place for such.

How a Player Goes Back.

"Just now, while the annual Cy Young and George Van Haltren stories are going around and the base ball writers are using up reams of paper telling how long these men have been in the game, a lot of folks are wondering why so many ball players last a few seasons, go back to the minors and then disappear entirely," says a baseball veteran.

"The average baseball life is generally conceded to be somewhere between 10 and 12 years. A man may work in a rolling mill 12 hours a day for 20 years, he can make delicate watches and high-grade works of art for a score of years, he can engage in all sorts of work that requires skill and good eyesight for perhaps twice as long as the average player retains his skill, and there must be some good reasons for this.

"It is a noticeable fact that all the ball players who have been in the game for years, and who will play as they used to, never lay off and loaf for long periods. Ball players by the hundreds quit all kinds of work when the season ends in the middle of October, and do not do a tap of work until March, when their clubs go South.

"Then the winter laggards have to swelter and work in a hot climate to get down to pay weight. Tacking weight off rapidly always saps a man's strength, so that those who grow fat in the winter are in a weakened condition for several weeks, and cannot do themselves justice.

"The temptation to drink and lead a fast life are greater in baseball than in more prosaic occupations. A star ball player is much sought, and hundreds of hangers-on in places where a ball player shouldn't be are tickled to death if the diamond hero will join them in a "good time." A lot of the younger fellows fall for it, and in consequence come back in the spring in mighty poor shape. An observer could name two dozen veterans who slow up just a little each season, who worry and worry to distraction each spring to catch on by the time the season starts, yet who spend their winters in luxurious idleness. It seems a queer way of doing.

"Some one has suggested that club owners sign up their players to a 12-months' contract and run a woodchopping brigade or a pedestrian club in the winter time. But the managers and magnates have enough woes keeping the men going during the season.

ITALIANS LISTEN TO ADDRESS BY GOOD SPEAKER

Last night the Italian missionary, Signore Thomas Baron, a prominent attorney of Oakmont spoke in a practical and enthusiastic manner to a large crowd of local Italians at the M. E. church, upon a prepared thesis: Religion and Socialism. The orator was very convincing and left a good impression in the souls of the Italians there, who earnestly desire to see the scepticism and the athesism suppresed.

We thank some of our intelligent friends, which although they are not in our line, for all that they helped, and encouraged us in the campaign against the pope's mystifying religion. We will do Christian work very well, if we tell to each of such persons with sweet and affectionate words, if we pluck them off from the superstition and ignore and in conclusion if we let them know the sentiment of virtue, of honesty of progress and civility.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Weeds That Sheep Eat.

The Minnesota station gives the analyses of weeds which sheep eat readily and their protein contents compared with alfalfa, clover and timothy hay. It will be a surprise to many to see how high in protein these weeds are, and it suggests the reason sheep flourish on them, worthless as they are otherwise. Here are the analyses: Lambs' quarters, 25.06 protein, 54.64 carbohydrates, 1.96 fat; pursiane, 26.13 protein, 53.70 carbohydrates, 2.9 fat; pigweed, 26.54 protein, 62.86 carbohydrates, 1.56 fat; dandelion, 24.64 protein, 58.95 carbohydrates, 2.70 fat; catnip, 22.25 protein, 63.07 carbohydrates, 2.66 fat; goldenrod, 11.63 protein, 76.65 carbohydrates, 4.85 fat; mustard, 15.75 protein, 75.50 carbohydrates, 1.55 fat; quack grass, 11.27 protein, 79.12 carbohydrates, 1.96 fat; alfalfa, 20 protein, 40.64 carbohydrates, 2.46 fat; clover, 13.35 protein, 52.28 carbohydrates, 3.65 fat; timothy hay, 8.75 protein, 41.76 carbohydrates, 2.16 fat.

Soiling Crops.

A mixture of Kaffir corn and cowpeas at the Pennsylvania station produced the largest yield of green substance per acre, was relished by the cows and was entirely satisfactory from the standpoint of milk production. Alfalfa produced the largest yield of air dry substance per acre, and the cows seemed to hold up better in milk production when on alfalfa than on any other crops tested. Oats and peas proved satisfactory as a soiling crop. Rye produced the earliest soiling crop and gave a large yield of dry substance per acre, but under average conditions it ripens too quickly to be most satisfactory. The different forage crops tested seemed to have little, if any, effect upon the composition of the milk.—American Cultivator.

Paulton's Prisoner.

By W. F. Bryan.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Absurd as it may seem, Edith Mortimer had run away from happiness.

Realizing that Guy Paulton was determined to marry her, she had looked into the commanding eyes and surveyed the determined chin and had fled in a panic to the mountains after artfully announcing that she was bound for the shore.

This was not because she did not want to marry Paulton. To the contrary, the prospect thrilled her with tender delight, but what she did want was another social season without ties of any sort. She did not want to relish to the ranks of engaged girls and wallflowers after only one year's triumph as the belle of the season.

Guy, on the contrary, seemed determined to be married at once, and as a last resort she had fled to escape his proposal. From babyhood Guy had had a masterful way, and Edith knew that if she stopped to argue she was lost.

Her old chum, Belle Manton, who was going to Beach Haven, forwarded Edith's mail and otherwise helped to maintain the polite but obvious fiction.

Loyally she strove to protect her friend's secret, and, though Paulton alternately begged and threatened, he could gain no hint of Edith's whereabouts. Edith smiled at the desperate letters he wrote, but she carefully saved them in her little rosewood traveling desk, and could Paulton have seen the tender light in her eyes as she reread them in the quiet of the summer nights he would have been content. The trouble was that Paulton could not see, and he was putting in a most uncomfortable summer.

had stumbled on a quaint village far from the haunts of fashion. In simple gowns and with her hair in braids she rejoiced at the freedom from dress and social routine that had been her portion all winter. In her gingham sunbonnet she might have passed for the daughter of a farmer, and for the moment Guy Paulton took her to be such when he came upon her in the little wood where Edith spent most of her time. Her back was turned to him as he parted the bushes and trampled down the ferns.

Edith started at the sound of his voice, but promptly drew the all concealing bonnet down in front and managed to stammer an answer to his question if she had seen any soldiers about.

For the first time she noticed that he was in uniform, and she immediately realized that the rough service dress was most becoming. Paulton was built in heroic mold, and, though he looked well in the conventional dress of a man of fashion, the heavy blue shirt, open to display his fine throat, and tight fitting riding trousers emphasized the good lines of his powerfully muscled figure.

Edith shook her head.

"You are certain that there have been no soldiers about," he asked again, "no chaps in brown uniform?"

"Haven't seen any," denied Edith in nasal tones. "You're the first soldier I've seen since the county fair. Is it a parade?"

"It's a game of war," explained Paulton. "They divided the militia into two armies. The browns must beat the blues to win, and of course we blues are anxious to see that they don't. I am supposed to be scouting."

"Like real soldiers?" she asked innocently.

"Of course," was the impatient reply. "That is the whole idea, to train us like the regulars."

Edith giggled in a very good imitation of Dolly Spence, the village flirt.

"I didn't know that real soldiers stopped to talk to girls when there was a war on," she suggested as she raised her hand to the bonnet the better to adjust its shade.

The movement was fatal to concealment. Paulton noticed that her hand was unusually white for a girl who worked about the farm, and the next instant he recognized the slight filigree band that circled one of the slender fingers. It had been his mother's, and how often he had suggested to Edith to wear it!

"We are like regular soldiers also because we are not above a pleasant little flirtation," declared Paulton smilingly. "I believe that a regular soldier would kiss such a pretty face as yours!"

"How do you know that it is pretty?" demanded Edith from the security of the sunbonnet's shade. It hurt her to think that Guy would flirt with any girl he met, but she was determined to carry the game as far as she dared.

"I'll take the face on trust," announced Paulton calmly. "All's fair in love and war, they say, so your face must be fair, since this is mimic war."

"Maybe it's only make believe fair, since this is make believe war," suggested Edith coquettishly.

"To the contrary, this is very real war," declared Paulton, "and I am obliged to place you under arrest."

"What for?" demanded Edith, not without some alarm. "You cannot draw country folks into your games."

"You are wrong," retorted Paulton. "It is the soldier's duty to take into custody those enemies of his country whose sentiments threaten the success of a campaign."

"But I am not your enemy," protested Edith. "I won't be taken prisoner."

"Perhaps," assented Paulton, "but a stern duty confronts me. I must take you [illegible] and ... court martial unless"—

He paused tantalizingly.

"Unless?" She told herself that if he demanded a kiss as the price of her freedom she would never look at him again.

"There is but one way out of it," continued Paulton. "I have just [illegible] of its products. There is a parson just [illegible] passed through not very long ago. We will ride over there and get married, and then I shall be certain that you are not an enemy to the country."

"And if I refuse?" asked Edith loftily, in her anger dropping her vocal disguise.

"In that case," answered Paulton, "I am afraid that you will be thrown into the guardhouse until you change your mind."

"I shall report you to the colonel," cried Edith angrily. "He will not tolerate such conduct."

"I am quite certain that the colonel will approve my conduct," said Guy placidly. "He himself told me that I ought to marry, and I assured him that through no fault of mine, bachelorhood was my lot. I am sure that he will be pleased at the promptness with which I have acted upon his suggestion when I bring my bride into camp."

"I won't be your bride," stormed Edith. "You are rude and ungentlemanly to take unfair advantage of a woman."

"All's fair in love and war," reminded Paulton, "and this is both love and war. I am doing the loving and you have been doing the warring. Do you think it was fair to run away as you did and never give me a hint of your address?"

"You know me?" gasped Edith.

"Most assuredly," declared Paulton. "I was not positive until I saw that you were wearing the little ring I gave you and which you never would wear in town. Then I knew that perhaps there was a chance. Will you marry me, Edith?"

"Not now," protested Edith in sudden panic. "Guy, don't make me marry you right away. You have your scouting to do, and—I never did like the minister of that little church," she added inconsequentially. "Dr. Mixon is uncle's friend."

"May I come back when this cruel war is over—next week?" asked Guy pleadingly. "Then I'll ask Dr. Mixon to marry us, and we'll have our friends fly to save the prisoner of war marry her captor, just as they do in historical novels."

"I think that I'll just have to marry you," answered Edith. "You are such a [illegible]."

"All's fair"— Paulton began his favorite quotation, but the rest was lost in the pasteboard tunnel of the sunbonnet as he obtained a kiss.

The Larynx.

The larynx has been compared to a wind, a reed and a stringed instrument. [illegible] gave rise to the not very accurate phrase "vocal chords" as the name of the two cushions which are the most prominent features. But no string as short as these vocal chords could produce a musical bass note. In fact, the comparison of the larynx to any instrument which produces fully musical tones is misleading to begin with. There is no instrument but the larynx which produces both song and speech, and we have no experience with the larynx to rely as a producer of musical sounds we have no further experience with them at present. Besides, the voice can be studied for speech, elocution and oratory without a knowledge of the physiology of the larynx.

We have the power of adjusting the tension of its cords, cushions or diaphragms, as they have been variously called. We can do these things without scientific knowledge of how they are done, without any knowledge [illegible]

Plans For New Dairy Barns.

For the past two or three years the dairy division of the department of agriculture has been making an investigation of all the principal dairy barns in the United States and a study of the best methods of construction, with reference to convenience, cheapness in feeding and hauling of stock, sanitation, etc. The result is that the division has a large number of plans suitable for building barns and stables of varying costs, so that any one contemplating building a barn can obtain, by simply corresponding with the chief of the division, a set of building plans which will probably just about [illegible]

Horse Sense.

Turning the work teams out to pasture at night is better than keeping them shut up in a close, poorly ventilated stable.

Every farmer must have horses. Why not have the best, then, and make a little profit on the side from the colts?

The time to sell the colt is when a good price is offered. It's good policy to have him ready to attract the good price, though.

Begin to handle the little fellow when he is very young if you would keep him from getting wild. Be judicious about it, though, at all times.

Hog Notes.

The low with large lungs is rapidly growing in favor.

Very frequently the feeding amounts to more than the pedigree.

Dipping hogs is no longer a tedious job. The modern tank simplifies it.

An average litter of seven or eight pigs will be pretty nearly sure profit.

A good way to save high priced corn is to provide good alfalfa pasture.

The man who never has dipped his hogs is the man who objects to it most.

A good boar will do a great deal to put the last end of your farming upon solid footing.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

The Reward of Beauty.

"What a beautiful little girl!" said the woman.

"Yes," replied the man, "and some day it may be necessary for her father to pay millions in order to get some scrawny little foreigner with bowlegs and watery eyes and a receding chin to marry her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Silage For Beef.

Everywhere the feeding of silage to dairy cattle and beef cattle, horses and hogs is attracting each year more and more attention. The Ohio experiment station has recently completed a test in which it was established that corn silage under the conditions of the experiment had a value of $4.63 per ton in feeding for beef. In view of this, let any one not feeding silage consider what he is losing when an acre of corn makes ten to fifteen tons of silage.

Green Food For Poultry.

The value of green food for poultry lies in the aid it renders the digestion of other foods and in the effect of distending or adding bulk to the ration, besides affording various and valuable nutrients, particularly protein, which food constituent is indispensable in the growth of any animal. Protein is the element of food which produces bone and muscle, and any growing animal in order to thrive must have the required amount.

Mashes For Poultry.

The feeding of mashes to poultry is not looked upon with so much favor at the present time as formerly, says the Farmers Advocate. However, if mashes are to be fed, skimmilk or buttermilk will make a valuable addition to the mash. Milk in any form is a valuable source of protein, and the birds should be fed as liberally as possible of milk and its products.
